DNA Discoveries

(<http://www.thirteendimensions.com/wp-content/uploads/2016/06/dnastructure.jpg>)The Russian biophysicist, Pjotr Garjajev, and his colleagues, have carried out cutting edge research on the more esoteric nature of DNA, particularly in relation to what is known as 'Junk DNA'. The research explains phenomena such as clairvoyance, intuition, spontaneous and remote acts of healing, self healing, unusual light auras, and more. It has been found by Garjajev and his colleagues that DNA can cause disturbing effects in a vacuum, producing magnetized wormholes; the microscopic equivalents of the Einstein-Rosen bridge in the vicinity of a black hole. The wormholes are believed to be tunnel connections between entirely different areas in the universe through which information can be transmitted outside of space and time. It is proposed that DNA attracts these bits of information and passes them into consciousness. One of the researchers, Dr. Vladimir Poponin placed DNA in a tube and beamed a laser through it. When the DNA was removed, the laser light continued spiralling on its own, as it would in a crystal. This effect was termed the 'Phantom DNA Effect'.

content/uploads/2016/06/phantomeffectvpoponin.jpg) It is believed the Phantom DNA Effect is significant in explaining the mechanisms underlying subtle energy phenomena, such as the observed alternative healing phenomena. The feature of this phantom effect that makes its discovery distinctly different from any other previous attempts to measure and identify subtle energy fields is that the field of the DNA phantom can be coupled to electromagnetic fields of laser radiation, and consequently, can be readily detected and identified using standard optical techniques. It also seems that the phantom effect arises without direct human influence. The data from the experiments is not only quantitative in terms of the coupling constant between the DNA phantom field and the electromagnetic field of laser light, but also provides qualitative information about the non-linear dynamics of the phantom DNA field, and both types of data are crucial for the development of a new unified non-linear quantum field theory which must include consciousness.

Codon Sequencing

The Russian scientists found that junk DNA was not a redundant leftover of evolution. Linguistic studies have revealed that the sequencing of the codons of the non-coding DNA follow the rules of some basic syntax, finding there is definite structure in the sequencing of what are known as triplets, with the research also revealing that the codons form words and sentences in the same manner as ordinary human language follows grammar rules. The origins of language has eluded scientists who have conducted research into it, but the research is suggesting that the origins of language lie in DNA. The language of DNA is very old, much older than any human language, making it conceivable that the DNA grammar itself has served as the blueprint for the development of human speech. The western Human Genome Project has deciphered the machine language of DNA, but the Russians have discovered a higher level language present in DNA. Garjajev also discovered that the codons of the DNA string can be rearranged in different sequences, implying that the software of DNA can be reprogrammed.

DNA and Laser Light

(http://www.thirteendimensions.com/wp-

content/uploads/2016/06/dna-phantom-effect.jpg) In conclusion,

Russian physicist, Vladimir Poponin has carried out experiments with DNA and laser light. He found that the light spiralled along the DNA helix as if guided by the structure of the DNA molecule. What really amazed Poponin was that after removing the DNA, the laser light kept spiralling. The vacuum of the space previously occupied by the DNA had changed and something was causing the laser light to keep spiralling. The effect has been measured, and found to remain for quite sometime after the DNA was removed. This effect has become known as the Phantom DNA Effect. The experiments have been repeated at the Heartmath Institute in the U.S.A, with the results being the same.

About

13 Dimensions evolved out of a field of thought that included spiritual concepts and ideas that emanate from the conscious mind. The mind itself, and the state of consciousness humans find themselves in, is integral to mental health and wellbeing, therefore, there is a focus on the mind and consciousness as it relates to psychology, psychotherapy, and the pursuit of happiness. There is much that is unseen or still unknown in our world, yet as time progresses, more is being discovered in the field of science, so this has formed another part of the path pursued by the website. The universe has fascinated man for eons, so astronomy, cosmology and UFO's are included in the categories. It was felt that a place was needed that brought together divergent interests such as politics and government, economics and banking, technology, and the impact this has had on the Earth's climate and ecosystems.

The founders believe in objectivity, supported by research and reference material where appropriate, and as a result, information shared on the website strives to be balanced and unbiased, but informative. It is hoped the reader will leave the website having gained further knowledge about a subject of their interest.
